Snake Creek Band of Outlaws Had Rendezvous Near Bixby Long Ago

By ROSALIE MILLER.

For Tulsa World.

Snake Creek band was a notorious corner of the world to those outside the Indian Territory, and people would hold up their hands in horror at the name, but nobody was afraid who lived there. They were protected and had nothing to fear, so we are told by an old settler at Bixby, who was one of the only white families that lived in that lawless section of the Creek nation.

Bill Cook, Jim Cook, Rufus Cook, Sam Shannon, Cherokee Bill, Al Jennings, and the Euche Indian outlaws made a klan that the world outside feared. Bill Scutter had a girl to go back on him and it ruined his life, so he held up a train at Red Fork, he and Bill Cook and Bill Jennings were here and New Mexico and was sent to the penitentiary for several years. While in the "pen" he was converted and later became a preacher.

"Snake R. ranch was at Jennings headquarters. From there he helped the poor of the community, relieved their suffering and never caused any trouble in the immediate community. In fact the only people we were afraid of was the Buck family of Euche Indians.

"Bixby was named for Tams Bixby, one of the commissioners for the Five Civilized Tribes, who was around here for 10 years. He was foreman of the Dawes commission, and we thought we might get a quicker answer by naming the town for him. There was a postoffice, a blacksmith and store on the reaching the markets of St. Louis, Kansas City, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, and Dallas, Fort Worth and other points in Texas with its products without trans-shipment."

Neighbors Husk Corn
Of Accident Victim

WELCH, Nov. 18.—By wearing a plane, 40 wagons with 40 or more corn choppers met last Wednesday at the farm of Mrs. Albie Price.

whose husband was recently killed in an accident, and shucked the 30 acres of corn on the farm by 10 o'clock in the morning. They delivered it at Russell Smith and sold it for the widow, then went back to the farm and harvested all the kafir corn on the place, selling it by 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Price will hold a sale, November 23, when she will dispose of practically everything on the farm and move to Vinita with her family.

"Chickasaw and surrounding country is probably unequalled for climate, agricultural and mining resources. It is the center of a rich shallow oil field and has an unlimited supply of natural gas and coal of fine quality. There is plenty of fire clay and clay for tile and for building and paving brick. Its wealth above the soil is many times greater than its wealth under. Grasses prosper, berries, and especially strawberries, abound, unequalled for flavor, size and production. Cotton grows unexcelled by the boll weevil. Sweet potatoes, melons, cantaloupes and grapes beat the world for flavor, size and early marketing.

"The price of the land is reasonable, dairy cattle and fine breeds of hogs thrive.
